On the real test, you will get one page (like the previous page) to outline your essay and four pages to write it. We have included these pages to let you know exactly how much space you will have on test day. Using lined paper for your practice essays is okay, but it's even better if you tear out and make copies of these five pages to be more accurate (or download them from mightyoaktestprep.com/downloads.htm

And yes, the first page of the essay really is shorter than the rest. On the real test, this space will have slots where you fill in your test booklet and writing test form numbers. This page is seven lines shorter than the next three.
